HOUSING.

Two notable legislative measures passed during the year 1912 affect the housing of the people. It is known that the housing question has been neglected by Parliament after Parliament since New South Wales. As long ago as 1901 a Housing Bill was prepared by the City Council, and nearly every Government which held office since then has attempted to pass it. Instead of an Act based upon the progressive laws of England and Germany being introduced, a hastily-drafted measure was rushed through Parliament in less than an hour to give the City Council power to build houses for the people as well as to destroy them. But in this bill no provision exists similar to the one in force in British Acts, compelling the Council to furnish dwellings if they are so requested or to compensate those displaced by the demolitions as nearly as possible back on the place from where they were removed. It is now at the option of the individual sections of the dispossessioned industrial districts whether they will accept compensation for economic or

GENERAL.

The University's encouragement of the study of local government law as part of a course in public health is continued. Mr. John Garrick as lecturer, in regard to public health, though certain epidemics have been controlled, such as typhoid fever and diphtheria—the health standard has been well maintained, as the annual reports of the health department have testified. It is either through insufficient funds, or for want of initiative, is still behind hand some years ago, in the matter of sanitation, in the older countries. The retirement of Mr. Ambrose Thompson from the presidency of the University, has placed the University with many great crises in the hygienic history of the community with decision and success. The University has been successful in stamping out of the plague outbreaks. He will be hard to replace, though the ripe and experienced Dr. J. H. Henshaw, the chief medical officer of health for the metropolitan district should make the University of Toronto a place where the principles of hygiene have made notable strides; and Mr. Carmichael has studied and applied the most modern methods of securing the health and comfort of the school children. At the Bedford Police Court on Wednesday, Mr. Payton, S. M., Arthur Henry Luck was charged with selling adulterated milk. Defendant, who is a resident of the city, was represented by a local attorney, who stated that the can had been standing in the defendant's counter for one and a half hour, and had not been tampered with. There were no suspicious premises. He was fined $2.00, and 60 days default imprisonment for 31 days.

"PERIOD" FURNITURE.

Echoes of the Past.

There is at present a marked and growing taste in favour of the reproduction of designs which originated in the last half of the 17th and the whole of the 18th century; perhaps the most interesting period of Fine Furniture production England has ever known.

The rugged construction and design of the Tudors had been influenced by the improving domestic condition of the nation, and though still essentially a period of "Oak," Elizabethan and Jacobean Furniture reflects clearly the growing desire for increased artistic expression in the equipment of the home.

Then followed the period of the "Restoration," which was well marked by the influence of the Dutch, and the general use of English Walnut as a substitute for Oak.

Throughout the first fifty years of the 18th century, the general use of Mahogany, and the influence of the great master Chippendale, whose name has probably been more misapplied than any other in the Language.

And then closing the 18th century, and extending perhaps 20 years into the next, we come to the age of Satinwood, associated with the work of Sheraton, the Adam brothers, and others. So much for the mere chronology of the "Periods" with which the present revival deals. Differing much the one from the other, they are all intensely interesting in their peculiarities.

We have very much pleasure in announcing that we have just added seven exhibition rooms, containing fine specimens of JACOBAN, CHIPPENDALE, WILLIAM and MARY, ADAM, and SHERATON PERIODS.

Among these will be found specimens of Dining Room and Bedroom Furniture, besides a large number of Sundry Occasional pieces, all remarkable for charming design proportions. Our Windows show a Chippendale Dining Room Suite in old Mahogany and comprising—

- A SIDEBORD, about 6ft.
- BUFFET WAGGON, about 4ft.
- A DINING-ROOM TABLE, extending to 8ft.
- 6 CHAIRS AND 2 CARVING CHAIRS.

Upholstered in Green Morocco.

Much misconception springs from the widespread belief that a piece, say, of Chippendale, is not genuine unless it was fashioned by the hands of Chippendale—a misconception based upon the idea that Chippendale and his brother artists, who have given their names to different styles of Georgian Furniture, were working cabinetmakers. As a matter of fact, they were designers, purely and simply. They published books of their designs for the use of furniture makers, and the majority of the fine models that survive were achieved by those furniture-makers that employed the most skilful workmen—that is to say, most skilful at interpretation of designs placed before them. Now, it must become obvious at once that these books did not perish with their authors, nor were they at the sole disposal of the men who worked during the author's life-time. They have continued to be published, and the cabinetmaker of to-day is as free to be guided by them as were the cabinetmakers of a hundred years ago. Indeed, our own contemporaries have an advantage over their predecessors in that, in addition to the designs, they have the innumerable fine models that are to-day accessible for their guidance in their interpretations of the spirit of the masters.

The term "genuine" in its application to furniture of this class can, therefore, mean little more than a consummate fidelity to the original designs—a fidelity founded upon talent, research, and infinite care. These latter qualities are rare enough in the present day of the haste in the construction of all things, and that, perhaps, may be the reason why a certain section of the public cannot bring itself to furnish in the Georgian manner, unless it can furnish with pieces that are actually old. And yet, given that a cabinetmaker of to-day be sufficiently skilful, painstaking, and artistic, there is no reason why he should not produce a set of Chippendale Chairs, a Sheraton Sideboard, or a suite of Adam's Furniture, that is as worthy of being called "genuine" as anything constructed by contemporaries of these designers.

We think the present small collection will appeal to lovers of the beautiful in form and design, and hope to have the pleasure of showing these fine specimens to the large number of ladies and gentlemen in Australia who are interested in the refining influence of Art in our homes.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS

If the 1884 Superannuation Act is amended somewhat on the following lines, I think the Government will please the public servants who have entered it since 1856 would have an opportunity of doing so.

That all ex-contributors be permitted to pay the 1884 fund, and if they so desire, to pay up all arrears.

That all present public servants who are not in the Government employ be allowed to join on to the 1854 fund up (should they so desire) the amount of their arrears, and that the Government contributions that would be due from

PROGRESS OF PLAY.

START OF THE SIXTH GAME.

The match of seven games up between Mr. W. S. Viner and Dr. Lancaster was resumed yesterday at the School of Arts. The adjourned fourth game was won by Dr. Lancaster after a protracted struggle, at the 76th move. The winner played good chess. The fifth game was won by Black order by Mr. Viner, due to his opponent's mistake at the 11th move, which was the last move of the game.

The sixth was opened by Dr. Lancaster with IP to Q4, and the game proceeded on level terms until the P to K18, 2P to K1-P take P; 3 Kt to Q13. When play was adjourned at 10 p.m. the doctor had the greater command of the board, the knight playing a game which was somewhat cramped.

Some of the phases of the games appeared below—

TRAM HANDLING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I wish through your columns to draw attention to the exceedingly dangerous manner in which the trams are handled on one particular corner every Sunday. Painful notices advise citizens that trams will be there, which is true on six days of the week, when Sydney's great department stores are open, but on the seventh day they by pass this stop, and so cause many accidents. Only yesterday an elderly man was killed through walking over to catch the tram, which did not as usual stop; while one of my boarders, Mr. T. A. Brown, of Claremont, was seriously injured. This is the fourth person stopping with me who has been injured by trams during the last six months. It is nearly time the department arranged that the same stops should be made on Sundays as on other days during the week, especially as this is one of the most important shopping centres of the city, and people are apt to be careless about their lives, and the lives of others, when they are out of town. A certain charitable section of the community will very likely agree, "Oh, the publisher's boarder injured, must have been killed," so I should like to add that Mr. T. A. Brown is a life-long boarder.
